

Friends of Allonby try to break through the Kingston defence in the women's final.

Dragon confront Ulster in the open final.

balance from a mêlée under the Ulster net. Ulster had shots blocked or missed and each side had shots blocked until Dragon went ahead six minutes into the game. Each side blocked opposing shots until Ulster broke a paddle a minute from time, not the first paddle to be broken this tournament. Right on the hooter Ulster tried a long shot, too long as it fell short.

Into the second half, Ulster dropped the ball to waste an attack and both teams tried shots that were too high before Ulster found a gap to even the scores. Dragon foiled another Ulster attack and then there was four minutes of indecisive play before Dragon put a shot over the net. Then, with people counting down to the final hooter, Ulster put themselves ahead 11 seconds from time to take the title.

W: 1 Kingston. 2 Friends of Allonby. 3 Rhondda.
Y: 1 Pennine. 2 Aberfan. 3 Ulster.
O: 1 Ulster. 2 Dragon. 3 Kingston.

Where are they now?
 Ben Savage, formerly coaching the Blackwater Valley polo team, is now touring with Hannah Sanders as an Americana folk duo from Cambridge, here as the inaugural act at Kazbar in Yeovil.
